

Kraig Biocraft Laboratories Enters Into New Collaborative R&D Agreement with the University of Notre Dame

LANSING, MI, Aug 05, 2010 (MARKETWIRE via COMTEX) -- KraigBiocraft Laboratories, Inc. (OTCBB: KBLB), a biotechnology company focused on the development of commercially significant high performance polymers including spider silk, today confirmed that earlier this year the Company entered into a new collaborative research and development agreement with the University of Notre Dame relating to the development of new polymers.

"The rate of progress and scientific development achieved over the last twelve months has exceeded our expectations. I believe that we are now ahead of our scheduled timeline for R&D and product development," said Kim Thompson, Kraig CEO. "The new collaborative research agreement was designed to help us maintain that momentum. We are also hopeful that our recently completed S1 registration will enable the Company to further accelerate our development of new materials."
